

WILD WEST DIVISION OF ARMY NAMED TO PRESERVE WRONG IDEA

(By Associated Press.)

CAMP LEWIS, Tacoma, Wash., April 20.—Preservation of a popular western idea, rather than any effort at description is responsible for naming of the Wild West division of the United States national army. The wild and woolly idea which is the general conception of the cowboy is discouraged at the remount depot of the ninety-first division, probably the largest remount depot in the United States and undoubtedly the most successful, too—under the most adverse weather conditions for handling great numbers of horses. It is a hard matter to get into the remount depot. Captain J. W. Jackson, in charge of the depot, has a list of 120 men, all experienced cowboys, and a sheaf of letters each containing applications for enlistment. And a great portion of these men in all probability will be rejected.

The wild west circus rider and the fellow who boasts of his ability to ride anything from a pinto to a steer, are not the sort of men Captain Jackson is seeking to train the thousands of horses and mules so that they will be of some service to the army. Whenever a man applies for enlistment in Captain Jackson's organization, he must furnish references not only as to ability as a horseman, but as to character as well. Many men here came only after recommendations from the governor of their state and numerous public officials and influential men. Here are a number of instances of the sort of men Captain Jackson commands: Sergeant Earl Krantz, in charge of the feeding of animals, was at one time instructor in animal husbandry at the University of Washington and was serving in a similar capacity at the University of Utah when he resigned a $2000 job and came here to work for Uncle Sam at $30 a month.

Private Lewis, one of the best riders in the depot, was instructor in a Seattle riding academy and left that position to enter the army. He formerly was a cowboy but he is equally at home in a dress suit or in sombrero and chaps.

Private "Buckless" Winning is a famous Australian rider and relay racer.

Mickey Millerick is a former cowboy and for three years did wild west stunts on horseback for the movies in California before he enlisted.

Sergeant Marmon spent two years in medical school after spending years on his father's ranch near Wolf's Point, Montana, and now is in charge of handling the bay for 2500 head of horses and mules.

Sergeant Jack Harris gave up a law practice at Miles City, Montana, to enter service in the remount depot where his experience on his father's ranch near there would help him.

Andrew Dopee, for six years in the Belgian army as architectural engineer and who designed many buildings at San Francisco, designed the club house of the remount depot and planned the decorations which have made it one of the most attractive rooms for the men in camp. Sergeant Walter Kne, known to his comrades as "Bear Tracks," was government range rider near Ogden, Utah, before coming to camp.

Sergeant W. A. Richardson, foreman of the remount depot, was stock inspector in Montana before the war and resigned his position, sold his home and brought his family to Tacoma so that he might do his bit for his country. Sergeant Richardson told Captain Jackson his ancestors had taken part in every war of the United States and he wasn't going to let his family tradition die with him.

"Powder River" Teich, a Montana soldier at the remount depot, owns a big ranch and last fall shipped $14,000 worth of cattle.

Paxton Irving, of Ross, Wyo., whose father is a rancher and who is worth $60,000 in his own right, turned over his ranch interests and came to Camp Lewis as a private for $30 a month.

Ora De Mill came here from Canada where he was well known as a range rider.

The enlisted men of the remount are fighters. They have fought everything from a wild steer to a cattle thief on the plains, but in all the time they have been at camp they have never had a fight and never have had a member of their organization in the guard house. They also are proud of a record of never having had an accident serious enough to send the victim to the base hospital.

KAISER WOULD SACRIFICE HALF HIS MEN FOR SPIRIT OF SAMMIES

(By Associated Press.)

BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, April 20.—The Germans are in for a rude awakening if they are sincere in discounting the American army in France, in the opinion of F. M. Cutlack, assistant official correspondent with the Australian Imperial force here.

"The Americans," he asserted, "have a spirit for which the Kaiser would sacrifice a good half of his numbers if he could get it into his troops today." Returning from a visit to the American forces Mr. Cutlack wrote:

"The dominant fact in the arrival of the United States army is the huge bulk of it. It is new—new as paint—and keen as a racehorse in training—or rather a whole pack of racehorses. The world will probably not have the chance again of seeing such a spectacle of amateur warlike earnestness, for the Americans are learning very fast.

"It was something of the same sort when the Australians war army began long ago in 1914—the same light-hearted enthusiasm, the same rich quality all untrained and inexperienced, the same outpouring of the very best of a whole country in an emotion of national pride, counting neither cost nor returns. The Americans are not soldiers yet, and no people realize better than themselves how much they have still to do to make themselves soldiers, but they will be a great and powerful army in probably shorter time than they reckon upon.

"Great armies have before this been raised for great causes, and the British empire has the best of reasons for knowing how with the vital spark in him the most unutilized civilian may become a fine soldier. But no army can read of in history ever marched with a more splendid ardor or faced a great struggle with a more serene satisfaction than the American expeditionary force in France. And it is such a mighty army. They will not tell you how big, and you are discouraged from guessing, but we ran through all a spring day in a huge automobile and still the American host dotted the landscape, drilling, marching, maneuvering, building camps and roads.

"They are learning the art of fighting from the best soldiers of France and Britain, and many of their officers as attaches of one sort or another have seen a lot of this war from the German and Turkish side as well. We found a major who had watched the Gallipoli campaign from the top of Battle Hill and was in the confidence of Luman von Sanders and the Turkish jashas. He has therefore a particularly warm regard for the Australians.

"We went up to see the American line in Lorraine. In their khaki and round tin hats among the Lorraine hills they look and act very much like our own men; indeed they might be our own fellows. They have the same sturdy, self-reliant look. They spread themselves over country in the fashion of men accustomed to vast spaces. They walk with the same easy, free-limber carriage. Their discipline, like ours, is a thing which force could never impose or maintain, but is rather contributed voluntarily to a common good in violation of temperament and upbringing.

"Against these men, as against the men of the British empire, the Germans have no chance."

CHEYENNE WELLS PATRIOTIC TOWN

(By Associated Press.)

DENVER, April 20.—Cheyenne Wells, a town of 400 inhabitants in eastern Colorado, stands high for patriotism and liberality, according to F. C. Emmerich of the Denver office of the United States department of labor.

Mr. Emmerich, who returned from Cheyenne Wells a few days ago, says that at a Liberty loan meeting held there the people subscribed $10,000 for Liberty bonds. At an auction for the Red Cross held at the same time a calf was sold for $1190 and a hen brought $113. In the course of the bidding the hen became excited and laid an egg, which egg was knocked down for $125. The total amount subscribed at the patriotic meeting was $11,304.25.

Seventy-two men out of the population of 400 are serving in the army or navy.

WOMEN SUBSCRIBE

(By Associated Press.)

SEATTLE, Wash., April 20.—Canadian women made the first subscription in Seattle to the third Liberty loan, according to J. A. Swallow, chairman of the Washington state bond campaign committee. More than three weeks before the campaign opened the money for the bond, $190, was placed in the Canadian bank of Commerce by the Canadian Women's club and received the first place on the list of buyers. The money was raised at an entertainment.

EASTERN GAMES

(By Associated Press.)
BOSTON, April 20.—Bunch pitched his first game for Boston yesterday, held New York to four hits and won 2 to 1. Errors by Peckinpough and Pipp were responsible for two runs and a pass to Bodie, two infield outs and Russell's scratch single through Scott accounted for New York's one run. Boston also won afternoon game 3 to 5.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Within a few days the president is expected to issue a proclamation declaring women subjects of enemy countries subjects to arrest and internment and ordering German women to leave Washington at some definite future time. Women enemy aliens also will be forbidden to approach docks, wharves and warehouses under the same restrictions now imposed on enemy alien males.
